

Most of what was known of the two sided brain were discovered in the 19th century.

Paul Broca (language) and Wilhiem Wernicke (comprehension) from patients with physical defects or injuries in their brains.

For the first time in history scientists were able to track the differences between the left and right hemisphere of the brain.